A few helpful tips if you are packing yourself

Here are some handy tips to keep in mind if you are thinking of packing yourself.

De-clutter – you know that we all have stuff just sitting in the back of a cupboard collecting dust. Ask yourself, does it really need to go with you. If not, then it will save you money on your move and will reduce the clutter in your new home.

Put aside anything that you will need in the days leading up to, on the day and the day after your move.

Put these items in a suitcase or in its own box so you know where those essential items are. Pack room by room – start with a room that is used the least and once packed use this room to neatly store boxes from around the house.

Make sure you mark where you need the box you have just packed to be in your new home, also label what is in each box with the black marker pen. This will make life a lot easier in your new home.

Wrap cables in packing paper individually meaning that you will not have a box of tangled cables when you open it and use packing paper to keep these items together.

When dismantling furniture, put all the nuts, bolts and screws in a sandwich bag and tie this to the furniture itself. You may not think it, but they will be hard to find when you need them.

Use wardrobe boxes for your suits and nice dresses, they can go straight from the wardrobe into a box and back out again the other side keeping them clean and tidy.

Use smaller boxes for books and heavy items - do not overload big boxes and make them impossible to lift. Even the best boxes can give way at the bottom if they are overpacked. Pack out your china and glass boxes with packing filler to reduce the risk of breakage.

Maybe... invest in a tape gun, this will make your life a lot easier when building and sealing boxes.

Re-direct your post

When moving home there are a lot of things to take into consideration and even with the best organisation in the world, somethings may slip through the net. Even if you think you have notified everyone of your new address, it may be a good idea to use the Post Office's mail redirection service to ensure that you receive everything sent to you at your old address.

Once you've signed up to the Post Office's redirection service they will forward all mail sent to your old home on to your new home. You can redirect your mail for three, six or 12 months.

You can sign up online, by post or at your local Post Office branch. All they will need is:

- the names and dates of birth of everybody who need their mail redirected
- your old address and postcode
- your new address and postcode

If you're moving soon, make sure you give them a week's notice to get things ready.

Even if you use the Post Office's mail redirection service, it's a good idea to inform important companies, such as banks and utility companies direct (use the checklist in this leaflet to remind you who to contact).
